Answer the questions (9-10) according to the text.

Communication has always been important among people in history. People used smoke signals and messenger birds. They seem funny now. Then the people invented the printing machine, telegraph, telephone and television. They were great inventions. But when we think about cell phone and the Internet, we see that the technology has come to a very different end. We cannot guess what the people will invent in the future. I think the people will find our communication methods funny, too. Who knows...
